November 18, 2014

Tom Laudati, CTO, Rosary De Filippis, Executive Director, Business Development and CMO, and Mike Woods, Senior Director, Mainframe Technical Services, attended CA World 2014 in Las Vegas.

Showcasing Our Latest Solutions for Security, DevOps and Management Cloud CA World '14 drew excitement from media and analysts. With more than 20 journalists and 35 analysts present at CA World '14, several exciting announcements were made about the latest solutions for DevOps, Security, and Management Cloud: New and updated API management solutions that accelerate mobile and web application delivery, improve customer engagements with frictionless access and open new revenue channels and opportunities. CA also announced an expanded alliance with Samsung KNOX to provide mobile app single sign-on (SSO) for Samsung KNOX enterprise users, while controlling app access to the enterprise API. Chief Technology Officer John Michelson emphasized the importance of DevOps solutions as a new strategy to meet customer expectations. The new launch of CA Mobile App Analytics (CA MAA), CA Service and Release Automation 5.5, will help with that strategy and will be the industry's most comprehensive third party, open-source integrated capabilities solution. The Management Cloud is a broad portfolio of easy-to-use CA applications, delivered from the cloud, that enable customers to make the right portfolio decisions, deliver exceptional service experience and empower the modern, mobile workforce. This includes three sets of solutions: CA Cloud Service Management, CA Project and Portfolio Management and CA Enterprise Mobility Management. The announcements around CA's new and enhanced solutions have significantly increased the energy at CA World '14, and the spirit among existing and potential customers, media and analysts. "I had some excellent interviews with CA executives, and the keynote sessions were very interesting," said Stephen Withers, iTWire, out of Australia. "The talent and vision for the company is impressive. I look forward to seeing the vision become reality and reporting how CA customers benefit from it."
